

"All I DO is GOLF."

Boys' golf sends Trasser to state

After qualifying for state in the 2014, the Brookfield Central Boys golf team took a huge hit, losing 60 percent of their starting lineup. The only returning members were Sean Yun ('16) and Josh Trasser ('16). The three vacant spots in the lineup were filled up by Kevin Hershberger ('16), Brandon Talaska ('17), and Zach Mindel ('18). Even with the huge change, the boys began the season with the same goals as the previous year: win conference, qualify for state, and be successful.

The future of the team might have looked bleak to most, but Yun never doubted them. "We had many guys from last year's reserve team that were ready to play," He said. Talaska agreed, "I was so motivated to work my heart out and improve, as did everyone else."

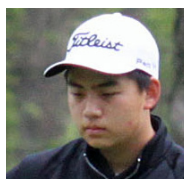

With this attitude, the team approached every opportunity as positively as it could. Even though the boys did not meet the first two goals on the list, they were still able to achieve the third. They might not have placed first in the GMC, but all of the athletes achieved new personal bests in their high school careers. Talaska had a 39 at the 3rd Conference mini-meet, Mindel an 83 at sectionals, Hershberger a 79 at regionals, and Yun a 74 at the Waukesha County Championship. They might not have qualified for state, but they sent Trasser, who, after shooting his career-best 76 at sectionals, moved on as an individual. He finished the season ranked 21st in the Wisconsin.

Looking back, Yun and Talaska were not disappointed. Yun explained, "Although struggled, we are proud of our season. We worked hard and will continue to work hard and even better next year."

1 GOTTA KEEP YOUR HEAD IN THE GAME Sean Yun ('16) stares at his putt, reading the line, and makes a mental game plan on how to proceed. Blocking out his surroundings allowed Yun to ignore the background noise and putt most accurately. 2 UNDIVIDED ATTENTION Josh Trasser ('16) glances up to see if his mental guess was correct, watching the putt sink. 3 I'VE GOT YOUR BACK Ben Peterson ('15) and Brandon Talaska ('17) work together to set up the next shot. A second opinion could be helpful in keeping concentrated while also having fun during the round. 4 COMMON COURTESY Mike Burzynski ('17) pulls the flag, a common practice allowing other players to analyze their putt and prepare their strategy. 5 STARING DOWN THE COMPETITION Kevin Hershberger ('16) surveys his upcoming putt, processing the line and the speed to build confidence walking to execute.
